

Sile Walsh

MSc, MAC, PSI, BPS

Associate Consultant

Sile has been working with individuals and organisations since 2008 across a number of sectors both nationally and internationally with clients in the USA, UK and Europe. Sile is experienced in supporting leadership development, values and behavioural alignment, organisational development, cultural development, individual and team performance and supporting tailored solutions to barriers that impact wellbeing and performance. Sile is passionate and experienced in designing, training, supervising and facilitating interventions cross sectors.

Sile's formal education includes the HDip in Coaching Psychology and MSc in Personal and Management coaching from University College Cork. Alongside additional qualifications in Leadership, Participatory Management and Professional Supervision. Sile is a registered member of the Association of Coaching, a coaching and organisational member of Psychological Society of Ireland and a psychometric tester with the British Psychological Society.

Sile completed her MSc thesis in "Understanding the Barriers and Facilitators to Systemic Psychodynamic Coaching in Organisational Development" with a nod to Dialogical Organisational Development and is currently in the early stages of utilising the qualitative research to author a book on the effective use of coaching within organisational development.

At Roffey Park Institute, Sile works with HR professionals and leadership teams to promote coaching psychology and dialogic approaches in organisational development and change strategies for the improvement of performance and wellbeing across all levels of an organisation.

Sile works with developing capacity across organisations through facilitation, coaching and shadow consulting. She has worked within a range of sectors including tourism, food, education, healthcare, tech, finance, not for profits and within the social sector nationally and internationally.